Als Carpenter-Effekt (oder ideomotorischer Effekt) wird das Phänomen bezeichnet, dass das Sehen einer bestimmten Bewegung sowie – in schwächerem Maße – das Denken an eine bestimmte Bewegung die Tendenz zur Ausführung ebendieser Bewegung auslöst. Der englische Naturwissenschaftler William Benjamin Carpenter (1813–1885) beschrieb diesen ideomotorischen Effekt zum ersten Mal 1852.

Ready-to-wear or prêt-à-porter; often abbreviated RTW; "off-the-rack" or "off-the-peg" in casual use) is the term for factory-made clothing, sold in finished condition in standardized sizes, as distinct from made to measure or bespoke clothing tailored to a particular person's frame. Off-the-peg is sometimes used for items other than clothing such as handbags. Overall ready-to-wear fashion exposed women to the newest styles and fashion trends, leading to a substantial increase in profits by US factories from $12,900,583 in 1876 to $1,604,500,957 in 1929. The ready-to-wear fashion revolution led to an expansion of the US fashion industry that made fashionable apparel*

“ONLYSANS IS A POSTGEOMETRIC SANS, THOUGH such distinctions are arbitrary, whispered into the wind by those who refuse to see the world for what it is. It clings to the illusion of structure—clean, obedient, geometric—yet within its letterforms lurks an unshakable absurdity. It is duplexed, its weight shifting yet occupying the same space, like a body aging without ever moving, a monument to the futility of permanence. Use it for branding, for interfaces, for the brief and flickering moments before the machinery of civilization collapses. And because all things must return to nothing, I offer it freely for projects that confront death. In the end, this is all it was ever meant for.”

About:

Onlysans is a postgeometric sans. It maintains the appearance of rationality—clean, precise, modern, yet harbors strange mischievous details. It is duplexed, meaning the letters occupy the same space regardless of their weight—a futile attempt at stability in a world that offers none.
